observed in the 20 policies analyzed. While reflecting these distinctions, they nonetheless prioritize and award the international standard of mandatory external reporting for all instances of use of lethal force with the full 25 points.

In particular, the sub-elements account for two main distinctions observed in policies: (1) internal v. external contact or reporting procedures; and (2) procedures triggered by all instances of use of lethal force v. only instances that result in death or serious bodily injury. The latter accounts for whether a policy requires accountability for when officers shoot at, but miss, human targets or only when they hit a person, killing or injuring them. Use of lethal force occurs each time a police officer shoots at a person, regardless of whether he hits or misses the person. The authors therefore awarded more points to policies that do not distinguish between hits or misses, requiring accountability for both.

The term “contact” in the second and third elements refers broadly to a notification process or other kind of contact to indicate that use of lethal force, death or injury has occurred. Contact and notification may require a summation of the facts of the incident, but not full reporting. The term “reporting” in the last two elements refers to the internal police department report created when lethal force is used, or something substantially similar, rather than a summary or brief of the incident. While the grading system does not evaluate the quality of the reporting forms and how they are used, it is important to note that the quality matters a great deal for effective accountability. For example, a reporting form that requires law enforcement officer to provide detailed descriptions of the de-escalation tactics used before the use of a weapon, or the kinds of warnings given before the use of force, and whether the officer considered retreating instead of engaging, will allow for a more thorough evaluation and assessment of the legality of the use of force. Finally, review bodies external to police departments include government prosecutors, as well as other independent bodies with authority to conduct reviews of police use of force (e.g., the Inspector General in Los Angeles).

It is critical to note that for a system of reporting, whether internal or external, to be effective, it requires effective supervision and control, both internally by police leadership and externally by independent public officials. Whenever supervision, discipline, and (where appropriate) prosecution, fail to accompany investigative and reporting requirements, a message is sent that superiors, political leadership, and the public tacitly endorse unlawful and unprofessional behavior. Effective accountability therefore requires institutional, cultural and command commitment beyond what can be provided and measured in policies.

Accountability Grades Discussion

All 20 cities required internal reporting following all instances of use of lethal force. Phoenix, for example, included a provision titled “Reporting use of force incidents.” This section included a series of detailed instructions on procedures to be followed after the use of lethal force: “Employees will document the 97 The third and fourth elements are assigned 7 and 8 points, respectively, so that the highest possible score (short of fully satisfying the principle for 25 points) is 20 points—the first (5), third (7) and fourth (8) elements satisfied. The third and fourth elements subsume the second—i.e., both external contact in all instances of use of force and reporting only when death or injury results include external contact only when death or injury result. As a result, it is not possible to receive points for the second element in addition to the third or fourth.

use of each response option”; “Supervisors will submit the initial Use of Force Report within seven (7) days of notification of the incident”; “Use of Force reports will be submitted up to commander approval within 30 days of initiation of the report.” The report was then distributed to officials and entities within the department. These included: the involved employee’s supervisor; the Professional Standards Bureau; the Violent Crimes Bureau/Homicide Unit; and the Incident Review Unit. The department was not required to notify or distribute the report to any external entities. For serious incidents involving death or serious injury, County Attorney’s Office participates in the primary on the scene briefing.

Jacksonville required external contact only when death or injury resulted from use of lethal force. New York and Dallas required external contact in all instances of use of lethal force without external reporting. New York required the investigating officer to notify the District Attorney’s Office “in all shooting cases” and “[t]o confer with District Attorney before interviewing uniformed member(s) of the service.” The commanding officer is instructed to forward the initial firearm discharge investigation report to, among others: First Deputy Commission; the Chief of Department; the Deputy Commissioner, Legal Matters; the Deputy Commissioner, Training; the Chief of Patrol; the Chief of Personnel; and the Chief of Community Affairs.

The Dallas policy states that the Crimes Against Persons Division will conduct a criminal investigation, among other times, “[a]ny time an officer intentionally discharges his firearm.” As part of the criminal investigation of an officer involved shooting, Dallas required the Media Relations Unit to “coordinate with the investigative supervisor-in-charge and prepare a summary of the facts … for issuance to the news media,” as well as a summary of the results of the department investigation when it was completed. This constitutes external contact, rather than external reporting, because the internal police department report, or something substantially similar, was not shared; instead, only a summary of the incident and investigation were provided to the media.

San Jose and Columbus required external reporting only when use of lethal force resulted in death or injury to the subject. In these cities, only internal reporting was required when use of lethal force did not result in death or injury, including when an officer discharged his firearm at a subject, but missed. San Jose, for example, required “properly prepared case reports” to be submitted to the District Attorney’s Office following an officer involved shooting, defined as any time an officer’s discharge of a firearm resulted in “injury or death to any person.” The policy also authorized the District Attorney’s investigator to “monitor the investigative process employed by the Department, including monitoring at the scene,” following an officer involved shooting. Columbus required “copies of the investigative packet” to be forwarded to the county prosecutor for use of force resulting in “serious physical harm to or death of a human.”

Los Angeles and Chicago are the only cities that required mandatory external reporting of all instances of use of lethal force (i.e. discharge of a firearm),\textsuperscript{109} including those that did not result in death or injury. Los Angeles policy required the department’s “Real-Time Analysis and Critical Response Division” to notify the Office of the Inspector General of all instances of use of lethal force.\textsuperscript{110} The department was also required to distribute copies of the “Force Investigation Division” administrative report generated after every use of lethal force to the Office of the Inspector General.\textsuperscript{111} The assigned investigator or his supervisor was also required to “liaise with the assigned deputy district attorney and Inspector General to ensure that both [were] briefed and allowed to observe the investigation.”\textsuperscript{112} The Inspector General is an independent civilian charged with monitoring, auditing and overseeing the police department’s disciplinary system.\textsuperscript{113}

| Necessity (30 points) | Immediacy (10 points): lethal force may only be used against a person who presents an immediate or imminent threat. |
| | Only 5 points were given to policies that contained a general immediacy requirement but did not require immediacy in situations involving a fleeing felon. |
| | Particularized threat (10 points): lethal force may only be used in response to a specific heightened risk or threat (of death or serious injury). |

| Proportionality (25 points) | No sub-categories for the principle of proportionality. |

| Accountability (25 points) | Mandatory internal reporting for all instances of use of lethal force (5 points): all use of lethal force must be reported on to a body internal to the police department. |
| | Mandatory external contact only when death or injury results from use of lethal force (5 points): the police department must notify an external body following use of lethal force only when death or injury occurs. |
| | Mandatory external contact for all instances of use of lethal force (7 points): the police department must notify an external body following each use of lethal force, regardless of whether death or injury occurs. |
| | Mandatory external reporting only when death or injury results from use of lethal force (8 points): the police department must report to an external body following use of lethal force only when death or injury occurs. |
| | Mandatory external reporting for all instances of use of lethal force (25 points): the police department must report to an external body following each use of lethal force, regardless of whether death or injury results. |
Not one of the police departments in the 20 largest cities in United States has a human rights compliant use of force policy. None of the policies are constrained by a state law that complies with human rights law and standards. And too many police departments allow the use of lethal force in response to a non-lethal threat, thereby sanctioning unnecessary and disproportionate use of force.

These policy failures have contributed to the tragic killings of unarmed black and brown men and women by police officers around the country. Ensuring police use of lethal force in the United States is constrained by international human rights law and standards requires a broad range of legal, institutional and practical measures, from a solid grounding in legislation, to a committed political and police leadership. Human rights compliant laws and police policies are an absolutely necessary component, but they alone cannot operationalize and make real the human rights law and standards embodied in the four core principles. Instead, law and policies provide the foundation on which a structure of reinforcing attitudes, practices and mechanisms must be built.

Making law and police policies more than just paper promises requires, among other things: comprehensive, effective and ongoing officer training; effective supervision and planning; robust corrective measures applied to officer misbehavior; independent and transparent investigating and reporting; disciplinary measures; and mechanisms with real independence, resources, power and will to provide accountability. Nevertheless, true structural transformation of law enforcement practices in the United States must begin with police policies that comply with international human rights law and standards.

Ohio: No Law

(2) A law-enforcement officer is justified in using deadly physical force upon another person for a purpose specified in subdivision (1) of this subsection only when it is or appears to be reasonably necessary thereby:

a. To defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of deadly physical force;

b. To effect an arrest or to prevent the escape from custody of a person who he reasonably believes is attempting to escape by means of a deadly weapon, or who by his conduct or any other means indicates that he presents an imminent threat of death or serious physical injury to others unless apprehended without delay; or

c. To prevent the escape of a person from custody imposed upon him as a result of conviction for a felony.

Nothing in this subdivision constitutes justification for willful, malicious or criminally negligent conduct by any person which injures or endangers any person or property, nor shall it be construed to excuse or justify the use of unreasonable or excessive force.

Indiana: IC 35-41-3-3 Use of force relating to arrest or escape

(b) A law enforcement officer is justified in using reasonable force if the officer reasonably believes that the force is necessary to effect a lawful arrest. However, an officer is justified in using deadly force only if the officer:

1. has probable cause to believe that that deadly force is necessary:
   (A) to prevent the commission of a forcible felony, or
   (B) to effect an arrest of a person who the officer has probable cause to believe poses a threat of serious bodily injury to the officer or a third person; and
2. has given a warning, if feasible, to the person against whom the deadly force is to be used.

(d) A law enforcement officer who has an arrested person in custody is justified in using the same force to prevent the escape of the arrested person from custody that the officer would be justified in using if the officer was arresting that person. However, an officer is justified in using deadly force only if the officer:

1. has probable cause to believe that deadly force is necessary to prevent the escape from custody of a person who the officer has probable cause to believe poses a threat of serious bodily injury to the officer or a third person; and
2. has given a warning, if feasible, to the person against whom the deadly force is to be used.

(e) A guard or other official in a penal facility or a law enforcement officer is justified in using reasonable force, including deadly force, if the officer has probable cause to believe that the force is necessary to prevent the escape of a person who is detained in the penal facility.

The officer is justified in the use of any force: [§776.05]

1. Which he or she reasonably believes to be necessary to defend himself or herself or another from bodily harm while making the arrest;
2. When necessarily committed in retaking felons who have escaped; or
3. When necessarily committed in arresting felons fleeing from justice. However, this subsection shall not constitute a defense in any civil action for damages brought for the wrongful use of deadly force unless the use of deadly force was necessary to prevent the arrest from being defeated by such flight and, when feasible, some warning had been given, and:
   a. The officer reasonably believes that the fleeing felon poses a threat of death or serious physical harm to the officer or others; or
   b. The officer reasonably believes that the fleeing felon has committed a crime involving the infliction or threatened infliction of serious physical harm to another person.

h. Police officers shall not discharge their firearms at a dog or other animal except to protect themselves or another person from physical injury and there is no other reasonable means to eliminate the threat.

i. Police officers shall not, under any circumstances, cock a firearm. Firearms must be fired double action at all times.”

Justifiable homicide or use of deadly force by public officer, peace officer, person aiding

(1) Homicide or the use of deadly force is justifiable in the following cases:

   (a) When a public officer is acting in obedience to the judgment of a competent court; or

   (b) When necessarily used by a peace officer meeting the good faith standard of this section to overcome actual resistance to the execution of the legal process, mandate, or order of a court or officer, or in the discharge of a legal duty; or

   (c) When necessarily used by a peace officer meeting the good faith standard of this section or person acting under the officer’s command and in the officer’s aid:

      (i) To arrest or apprehend a person who the officer reasonably believes has committed, has attempted to commit, is committing, or is attempting to commit a felony;

      (ii) To prevent the escape of a person from a federal or state correctional facility or in retaking a person who escapes from such a facility; or

      (iii) To prevent the escape of a person from a county or city jail or holding facility if the person has been arrested for, charged with, or convicted of a felony; or

      (iv) To lawfully suppress a riot if the actor or another participant is armed with a deadly weapon.

(2) In considering whether to use deadly force under subsection (1) (c) of this section, to arrest or apprehend any person for the commission of any crime, the peace officer must have probable cause to believe that the suspect, if not apprehended, poses a threat of serious physical harm to the officer or a threat of serious physical harm to others. Among the circumstances which may be considered by peace officers as a “threat of serious physical harm” are the following:

   (a) The suspect threatens a peace officer with a weapon or displays a weapon in a manner that could reasonably be construed as threatening; or (b) There is probable cause to believe that the suspect has committed any crime involving the infliction or threatened infliction of serious physical harm. Under these circumstances deadly force may also be used if necessary to prevent escape from the officer, where, if feasible, some warning is given, provided the officer meets the good faith standard of this section.

(3) A public officer covered by subsection (1)(a) of this section shall not be held criminally liable for using deadly force without malice and with a good faith belief that such act is justifiable pursuant to this section.

(4) A peace officer shall not be held criminally liable for using deadly force in good faith, where “good faith” is an objective standard which shall consider all the facts, circumstances, and information known to the officer at the time to determine whether a similarly situated reasonable officer would have believed that the use of deadly force was necessary to prevent death or serious physical harm to the officer or another individual.

(5) This section shall not be construed as:

   (a) Affecting the permissible use of force by a person acting under the authority of RCW 9A.16.020 or 9A.16.050; or

   (b) Preventing a law enforcement agency from adopting standards pertaining to its use of deadly force that are more restrictive than this section.

Justification and Exemptions from Criminal Responsibility

(1) Except as provided in subsections (2) and (2.5) of this section, a peace officer is justified in using reasonable and appropriate physical force upon another person when and to the extent that he reasonably believes it necessary:

(a) To effect an arrest or to prevent the escape from custody of an arrested person unless he knows that the arrest is unauthorized; or

(b) To defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of physical force while effecting or attempting to effect such an arrest or while preventing or attempting to prevent such an escape.

(2) A peace officer is justified in using deadly physical force upon another person for a purpose specified in subsection (1) of this section only when he reasonably believes that it is necessary:

(a) To defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of deadly physical force; or

(b) To effect an arrest, or to prevent the escape from custody, of a person whom he reasonably believes:

   (I) Has committed or attempted to commit a felony involving the use or threatened use of a deadly weapon; or

   (II) Is attempting to escape by the use of a deadly weapon; or

   (III) Otherwise indicates, except through a motor vehicle violation, that he is likely to endanger human life or to inflict serious bodily injury to another unless apprehended without delay.

(3) Nothing in subsection (2)(b) or subsection (2.5) of this section shall be deemed to constitute justification for reckless or criminally negligent conduct by a peace officer amounting to an offense against or with respect to innocent persons whom he is not seeking to arrest or retain in custody.

(4) For purposes of this section, a reasonable belief that a person has committed an offense means a reasonable belief in facts or circumstances that if true would in law constitute an offense. If the believed facts or circumstances would not in law constitute an offense, an erroneous though not unreasonable belief that the law is otherwise does not render justifiable the use of force to make an arrest or to prevent an escape from custody. A peace officer who is effecting an arrest pursuant to a warrant is justified in using the physical force prescribed in subsections (1), (2), and (2.5) of this section unless the warrant is invalid and is known by the officer to be invalid.

P.M. 200.3 DEADLY FORCE APPLICATIONS
"An officer has no duty to retreat and is only justified in using deadly force against another when and to the extent the officer reasonably believes the deadly force is immediately necessary to (Tex. Penal Code § 9.51(c) and (e)):

(a) Protect himself or others from what he reasonably believes would be an imminent threat of death or serious bodily injury.

(b) Make an arrest or to prevent escape after arrest when the officer has probable cause to believe that:

1. The subject has committed or intends to commit an offense involving the infliction or threatened infliction of serious bodily injury or death; or

2. The officer reasonably believes that there is an imminent or potential risk of serious bodily injury or death to any other person if the subject is not immediately apprehended."

C. The use of deadly force against one who is fleeing from custody, or who is fleeing immediately after committing an offense, is prohibited unless the officer has probable cause to | G.M. 501.05 APPLICATION OF FORCE:
C. The use of force by an officer can be viewed as a matrix of force options used in response to a subject’s actions and behavior. The force matrix illustrates the relationship between a subject’s actions and the officer’s response. As force options move from lesser to greater levels, the risk of injury to the suspects and/or officers increase. The matrix is designed to assist officers in understanding how force can escalate |

Analysis

The evaluation of the Indianapolis policy shows that it fails to meet the fundamental human rights standards discussed in the text. The policy lacks an immediate requirement in all circumstances, and the fleeing felon exception is not adequately addressed. Therefore, it receives a score of 0 points.

In contrast, the Jacksonville policy is more aligned with the principles outlined in the text, particularly in terms of immediacy and particularized threat. However, the fleeing felon exception and the requirement to give some warning before using deadly force are not fully met, leading to a similar score of 0 points.

This comparison highlights the importance of developing policies that not only comply with international human rights standards but also address the specific challenges faced by law enforcement agencies in ensuring the safety and rights of all individuals.
